

NotifyMe

Tell it what you're waiting for. It watches. It tells you the truth.

Name of Project:

NotifyMe

Presented By:

Fatmah, Ankita, Ibrahim, Pavel

Presented To:

Collabute x TheBlock. Hackathon, 30/8/26

Problem

You are the cron job. ...

The flight that might be delayed.

The flat that might come back under 50k.

The job that might get posted tonight.

So you refresh. And you still miss it.

One sentence. One page. One notification.

No filters. No dropdowns. NotifyMe derives the constraints from your sentence.

Prompt

"Studio in Zaya Hameni, JVC, under AED 50,000"

Website

[bayut.com/to-rent/studio-
property/dubai/jvc](https://bayut.com/to-rent/studio-property/dubai/jvc)

Frequency

Every 30 minutes

How one check runs

Devin built it. Convex runs it. Context.dev reads the page.

Watch

Convex stores it and schedules it.

Extract

Context.dev reads the real page.

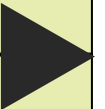

Compare

Convex diffs it against last time.

Decide

Only meaningful changes reach you.

What's next

Monitoring is per-site today. It should be a layer.

Multi-source

One intent across three portals.

Shared

Share a watch with flatmates or friends.

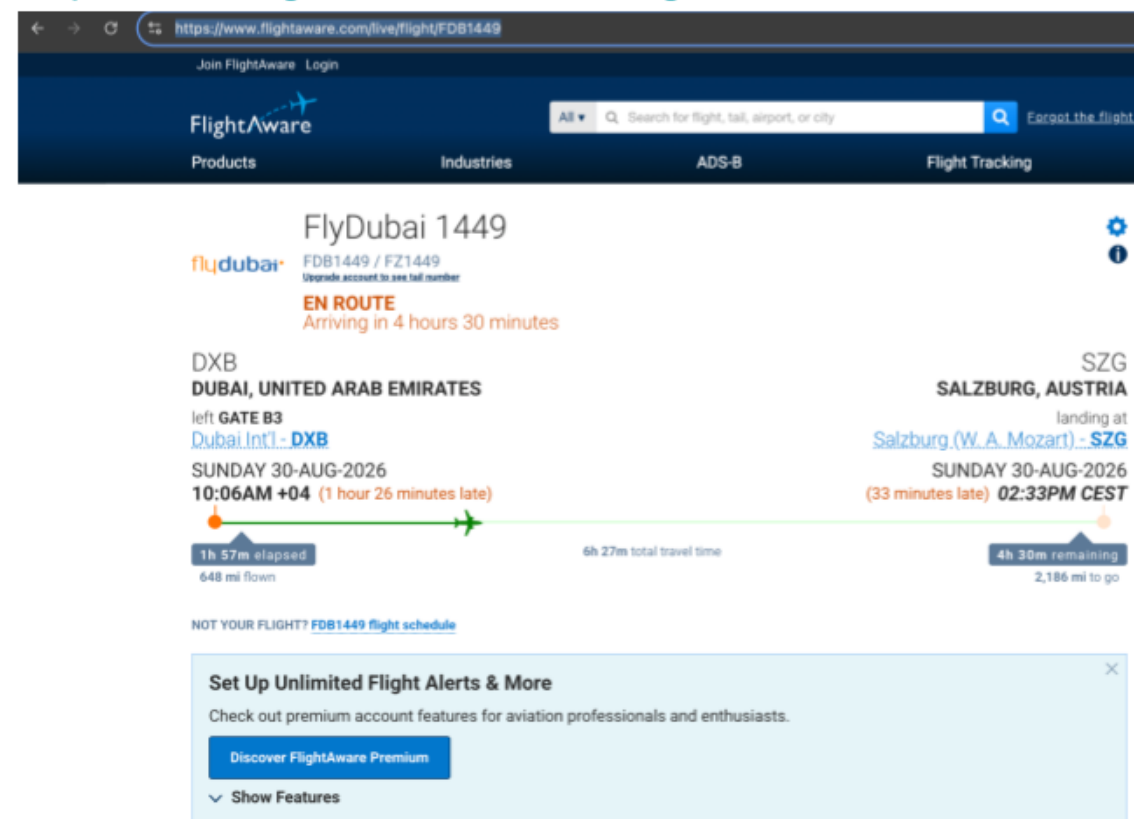

Alert budget

You set how often we may interrupt.

“Gaming meetups in Dubai tomorrow, in person.”

Live demo

A DUMMY job board we built so we could break it on purpose.

ShadyJobsDotCom is ours, so a real change can happen on demand instead of us hoping a third-party page moves while you watch.

One watch: “any new NFT Enterprise Sales Executive role.”
A real posting, a real check, a real notification.

DEFINITELY NOT A PYRAMID SCHEME

100% REAL-ISH

Tell me when it matters.

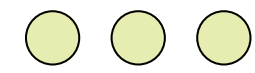

STOP REFRESHING. That is the entire interface.

One sentence, one page, one frequency. NotifyMe remembers every check, speaks only when something meaningful changes, and says so plainly when it could not look at all.

Everyone else calls that last case silence. We call it SOURCE ISSUE.
